Why Teaching is Transformational.

By Lynn Boggio

I recently began a class with three beautiful souls; E-Shah Cooper, Gina Carthan and Aboul – Malik Muhammad . It is very exciting for me to begin teaching the Mastery of Consciousness course again.

In my teaching journey, I have learned many things. In a previous conversation with Dr. Daniel Condron, he encouraged me to create classes instead of starting classes. He pointed out that I had been extremely successful at starting classes. Students would come for registration, stay for a class or two and then leave with no explanation. This even occurred with students who had requested several intuitive reports!

Recently, the discussion came up again about how to attract additional students. I was beginning to feel the similar frustrations and blocks returning. I knew there had to be a solution.

As I pondering this question, I felt an intuitive nudge to revisit Dr. Laurel Clark's guide to creating classes. She lists eleven suggestions for drawing students. One of these suggestions is to use meditation for answers and insights.

When I asked this question, in my meditation, I received some reveling images. I was taken back, to a scene thirty-two years ago, when I lived in South Florida. I was attending a local community college. I could “see” in my mind's eye, the details of the room and the apartment where I resided. Buried Memories started to return regarding decisions I made at that time. One of these decisions involved a romantic relationship that turned out to be unhealthy. This was one of the main reasons I returned to Ohio later that year.

What I received, in meditation, was I was still not forgiving myself for past decisions I deemed as failures or mistakes. This was interfering with me being able to attract and create with potential students. Holding onto the past hurts also prevents me from moving forward in my desires for my life. I also was reminded of a solution for forgiveness in my last Intuitive Health Analysis.

The suggestion was to say in my mind; whatever I have done to anyone that has harmed or hurt them please forgive me. Whatever anyone has done to me that has harmed or hurt me, I forgive you. Whatever I have done to myself that has harmed or hurt me, I forgive myself. All is forgiven. All is clear. I am well. I am free. When I recite this in my mind, I am releasing all negativity from my being. Holding onto the past truly does keep me stuck.

I was extremely grateful for the insight I received during my meditation. One of the major benefits of quieting the conscious mind is so I can receive from my inner self. I have recommitted myself to saying the “Forgiveness Mantra” in my Mind each day. In this manner, I will be open to receive students and sharing my wisdom for everyone's growth and learning.

MAPLEWOOD

The Joy of Expression

By Thomas Croft

Hello everyone, back at it again with another vibes article. The Maplewood branch of the School of MetaPhysics held a fundraiser called “The Joy of Expression.” This was a still-minded event led by Marcus Croft and me.

To start it off we presented a PowerPoint presentation clarifying the meaning of action painting. Action painting is a style of painting in which paint is spontaneously dribbled, splashed, or smeared onto the canvas, rather than being carefully applied. After we wrapped up the presentation, I demonstrated a painting to everyone showing how it is done. After that, everyone suggested that they wanted to do an individual painting so they could get a feel for the painting, and we all spent ten minutes creating these beautiful masterpieces. Everyone's artwork looked DIVINE. They were all so unique to them.

After that, we did a collective painting in two groups of five people and we went in a circle so everyone had the opportunity to paint and we gave everyone one minute to paint on the canvas. Everything turned out so amazing. I was truly thankful for this opportunity to teach, influence others. Me and Marcus will both be holding it in our minds to teach again as it was suggested for us to teach in our Past Life Profile. We both had an amazing time directing intelligence.

Terrence-LaMont and Jessica Leathers

led the Peace Pole Redication. They took out the old peace pole and planted a new vibrant peace pole. They also took the time to create the images for the words “May Peace Prevail on Earth” in four different languages on all four sides of the pole. It looks Divine, it now stands right out front of the Maplewood School Branch. Thank you Terrence-LaMont and Jessica for taking the time to put together this masterpiece.

TULSA

Finding a Building

Wendy Vann

I really have been asking myself lately why it has been taking a while to find a building for Tulsa. I think there are many learnings that are coming about around this process. For me it has been a journey of attention and concentration.

Most of my life I struggled with attention. I was previously diagnosed with attention deficit disorder. I learned several things to help me focus my attention like doodling if I'm in a meeting or limiting myself from leaving a task. Most of my real progress in attention began to change when I started at SOM. I am better at focusing on one task instead of trying to multitask. So having to focus attention on an ideal for over a year has been growth filled.

First I began to hold the attention onto this task daily. I would hold the Ideal in mind as often as I could. There will be times where I felt more movement and there would be great learnings around different types of properties, banking information, corporate versus residential zoning. And yet every time that I saw one that we came close to getting things fell through.

Then I realized I was holding the attention to it and as we found a building - I would release it to those that were in charge of more legal contracts and signage of terms. I think somewhere in this process because I was releasing it, it seemed to fall apart. Although I am not the one responsible for obtaining the legal part of the school, I am the Directing Intelligence at the Tulsa branch right now. And the Directing Intelligence was releasing and dropping the attention. I now see that even though there may be a property that I or another student have found, we need to hold that attention all the way through to the physical completion. Other people have their roles to fill in this process.

Other people will be deciding terms and signing contracts. I as the Directing Intelligence still need to hold that attention through to fruition. Again another lesson on basic attention and concentration!

SPRINGFIELD

All Will Be Well

By Kim Clarkson

On April 12 the first New Moon since the New Astrological Year began. Not only was the moon in Aries, but 5 other planets also joined the party to create a cosmic burst of fire energy. The planets are urging us to start anew, to grow, and to gain access to our own power. There is a focus on the divine masculine and feminine energies vibrating within us and showing us there is a need for growth.

Being very sensitive to energy changes and how they affect me, I have spent a lot of time reflecting on the divine in the weeks leading to the New Moon with a little help from the universe. On March 26th, our wonderful Springfield branch was graced with an amazingly timed talk from Dr. Pam about Julian of Norwich. Julian was a Christian mystic who chose to live a life of self-isolation - living in a cell that had a window to the outside world on one side, and a window to the monastery on the other. In her isolation, she wrote about a series of visions she had during a near-death experience in which she was shown by Jesus the perfection of all that is, the love of all that is and the assurance that all will be well.

She also believed in the creator as both a mother and a father - the divine feminine as well as the masculine. Society and our unaware conscious minds can catch these divine energies and manipulate their expression in the outer world. How we express these energies can give us clues about how we see ourselves, and how we commune with the creative energy around us. Do we tend to deny our divine feminine or our own masculine energies? Do we cast aside our feminine in favor of the masculine? Do we see one energy as weak and one as a tool for success? To deny one is to deny the whole, the self, the creator.

Oftentimes I feel my body is much like the cell Julian lived in, the soul that inhabits the cell has access to the spiritual and also society. Many times I am so quick to abandon awareness within my cell, I focus on looking out the window, I peer endlessly out one window or the other as an escape, and when I do, I have a tendency to keep my back turned to what is happening in the home I am living. When this happens I tend to, without thought, ignore the divine masculine and feminine that is always with me. I engage in behaviors and thoughts that do not express the highest forms of these beautiful energies. I reject the Self due to my lack of awareness and I ignore the vibrational changes within me. Change, even if good, can feel painful as we often prefer the familiar. Sometimes we cling to yesterday because tomorrow is unknown, completely missing today. The placements of the new moon and its fellow planets and satellites in Aries are a good reminder from the universe that change is happening and it is happening in the now. While Aries is ruled by Mars, a powerful, masculine, yin energy, the moon is a divine feminine force calling on us to find power in balance and reflecting on our own duality. To sit with ourselves and invoke the lessons of Julian of Norwich, I believe we can find guidance and self-acceptance that can lead to our healing and growth.

Regenerative Agriculture Article

Doug Bannister

Hello bright souls. Have you claimed your divinity today? I ask this because it may be one the most important questions you ask yourself. We are in the midst of the “Shift” that you have heard about for years. We are living it NOW. I do believe that history will show that this time period signals a momentous period in the history of Mankind, in the evolution of humanity. This will be recognized as the era where we as a species intentionally claimed our powers to create. Yes, of course, we have an intellectual familiarity of this thought, however we are still shedding our old skin that holds the belief that God is outside of us. Some still need an external authority to inspire us and/or to tell us what to think and act. Some of us still look for another’s approval. As students of the Mind, we are evolving our souls to this revolutionary and evolutionary way of thinking. We are making it our reality.

The time has come for each of us to be our own authority, while being humble enough to learn from others and from our own experiences. If we are not willing to be humble while still wanting to claim our authority as our own boss, so to speak, we risk repeated trips down the old pathways of worn out thinking attitudes. Now is the time to let go and to upgrade our thinking with honesty, discipline and the use of productive imagination.

The wise student of life contemplates the lessons of life. He/she/they are grateful for experiences of all kinds deriving value from them all without condemning the small self for misbehaving. The aspirant realizes life is about learning and graciously acknowledges that there is room for improvement, even as waking up to our soulful purpose, which is becoming an intentional and conscious creator.

The School of Metaphysics is also waking up to its role as a vehicle for evolutionary change. The school now has a fully functioning board of directors guiding it direction rather than one or two people making the important decisions. For example, the board has voted to engage the federal government in agricultural programs designed to conserve and improve our lands. The board has decided to explore the possibility of purchasing Bitcoin to protect its financial assets. These two remarkable decisions represent an effort to align with the evolution known by some as the “Shift”. The school aids people to become whole functioning selves in all ways. We encourage students to become their own authority, which carries a great responsibility to pay attention and self-adjust when appropriate, while respecting others. The board is promoting educational and economic programs that allow it to allow become responsible for its own welfare and modeling these behaviors for the all to see. It’s all in the application of the divine principles we call the Universal Laws. These come from our intention and our purpose. I am proud to claim my authority. I claim my association with the School of Metaphysics in this, perhaps the most important time in Man’s history. We claim our individual divinity and we claim as a collective that we come together in divine communion to serve ourselves, others and the Creator. All we have to do is to choose. We create our future.

THE NEW MAITREYA

by Barbara O'Guinn Condon

MASTER STUDENTS MAKE MASTER TEACHERS

How important is DREAMING in your life? In the lives of those you love? And in the lives of strangers, the people you will never meet?

Something Joseph Campbell, one of the world's great mythologists, said is often quoted because it carries that Eternal Truth sense that resonates deep within the core of human beings. Prof. Campbell said,

"Myths are public dreams. Dreams are private myths."

The mirror resonance in these two thoughts carefully juxta positioned with each other is stunning to me every time I place my undivided attention upon them. Joseph (like the interpreter of a Pharaoh's dreams millennia ago in Egypt) brought the world's myths together into one common think-space by the simple conscious act of honoring each one. For Campbell, every enduring story brought a personal message that revealed something about our own humanity. He called it the mono myth, the Hero's Journey.

In Spring 2021, the mono myth seems to be growing to expose all stories from all peoples and times and places. The level of public dreams is being stretched by a diversity that oddly questions independent thought. The right for private myths to exist is being challenged by a collective consciousness largely based on fear. Can the individual continue to exist within a group-think that insists s/he follow suit, even demands it through social peer pressure? That question has been part of humanity's storylines for thousands of years. Particularly in 'coming of age' stories.

'Coming of Age' stories. Hmmm. That is something worth stopping to examine. For truly, all human progress has been the result of inspired thinkers willing to accomplish what has yet to be done, often in the face of ridicule or opposition. (The Wright brothers come to mind. Tesla. Jobs. Elon. Gandhi. MLK. The Dalai Lama of Tibet.)

Such thinkers do 'it' while others keep saying, 'No! That can't be done!'

DREAMING WESAK

Since the time of Atlantis, we have been telling stories. Communicating the experience of life and death, and all the finite choices in between. For human beings, Life has been set on a timeline. From an infinite number of possible scenarios, we choose a course of action and a storyline begins. With a beginning, a middle, an end, incarnation is like a book. A movie. A dream.

In January 2000, I had the privilege of bringing the directors of SOM together in the first LIVING HOLOGRAM. I didn't know consciously at the time that the interactive engagement would continue even to today, yet that mattered no thing in that moment. The movement we manifested that evening, three years before the Peace Dome existed, echoed the multidimensional clusters that resonate in what are called the Spring Festivals.

These clusters are the coming together of those who experience a personal 'National Dream Hotline®'. A direct communication line from I AM through all aspects of the whole Self, the individualized nation. These individuals are aware of their existence in the inner levels of consciousness. And what is the purpose of our nighttime dreams? "To tell the dreamer the state of his/her conscious awareness."

Cluster Dreaming, like the coming together of Eastern and Western brilliance, is a willingness to see the fullness in every living thing. When you recall a dream echo this morning, however vibrant or faint, it is an act of appreciating life's fullness. It is an affirming of your desire for the inner and outer selves to communicate, to work together toward a common good. It is a willingness to improve the quality of life. A mirror to the broader vision of a common destiny for all humanity.

In Gene Keys, Richard Rudd refers to this life-affirming view as Synarchy. The Universal Peace Covenant states it this way: "Peace and security are attained by those societies where the individuals work closely to serve the common good of the whole." This is precisely the natural outpouring of consciousness that resets the global rhythm toward expansion of consciousness every Spring. Common dreams carrying a promise of love and wisdom as the guiding light for all humanity are life-giving. Thus the Wesak Dream lives on.

Like a ripple in a pool of water, the full moons unfold themselves one by one.
 ∞ The Christed One appears in the light of the full Libran moon.
 ∞ The Buddha follows a month later in Scorpionic light.
 ∞ The eclipse of the two, when the moon is full in the sign of Sagittarius, invites the resolution of duality.

These ripples of reflected light seem to exist in outerspace where they are personalized through acts of memory and imagination. DREAMING.

As you add your DREAMS to those of others, new classes form. Reasoning cuts through habitual traditions. Miraculous healings reconfigure DNA. Virtual Peace Domes breathe Peace into the world in circadian rhythm. And a Healing Wall in the heartland of the United States of America progresses toward its destiny of uniting the world - one stone at a time. The School of Metaphysics has been a reservoir of potentiality, waiting for activation through individuals, working closely for the common good, since its inception during a Wesak Festival a half century ago. Source Code matters.

May you Sleep well.

Dream wisely. Every day of this Life.

Why Be a College Student? An Interview with Dr. Daniel Condon

by Lynn Boggio

At the college this weekend, I interviewed Dr. Daniel Condon about the benefits students would receive by being a college student. He gave many insightful answers. Dr. Daniel Condon said "The College of Metaphysics is one of the few sacred sites on the planet. The sacredness has been deliberately created by the planting of the sacred geometric forms, planted at the intersection of lay lines on the property. " Being in nature also contributes to this sacredness.

Dr. Daniel shared, "A year that will bring forth the real Self and clear blockages to the real Self at an accelerated rate. Only by having the time to be with yourself can one come to know the real Self. A year or more devoted completely to knowing Self yields the richest rewards on the planet. This is what students can look forward to as they commit to themselves in this manner.

Interview with President Dr. Diana

By Lynn Boggio

Dr. Diana has introduced the study of "The Gene Keys" on Friday evenings of Third Weekends. How Dr. Diana came to the study of "The Gene Keys" is an interesting journey. Dr. Diana has been, in the school since 2006. She has taught many students, been a director as well as an area director. When she was in the Fourth Cycle of lessons, she had an experience where she embodied her Superconscious Mind. She was wondering how she could have that experience all the time. The answer came to her to love all parts of herself. This included the parts she did not want to always acknowledge. She realized she had locked some of these parts away from herself.

This experience encouraged her to receive her shadow side. She was introduced to "The Gene Keys" and realized this was a way to learn to love all parts of herself. She asked herself "How can we help people receive themselves with loving kindness?" She realized others have done this work, so she could do this work. Her experience in teaching has enabled her to teach "The Gene Keys" process to many others. In her own experiences, she realizes the shadow is the gift. It is a learning to take loving care of herself. In this manner, she can embody her Superconscious Mind in all aspects of her life.

Intuitive Reports Update With Mari Hamersley

By Lynn Boggio

Mari Hamersley is the dean of Intuitive Reports. Mari has been creating with Vicki Barbour, (a college student), to identify which reports from the branches need transcribing. A master copy of these outstanding reports was sent to each director by Vickie. We have over 60,000 reports completed over the last 45 years and these transcripts are very important to our small collection of the history of the akashic records. These reports are very important to education and public awareness of the inner mind. Our desire is to have each school complete their outstanding reports to be turned into the database at the college.

Mari is asking each teacher and director, at each branch, to let their students know about these outstanding reports. The students will benefit greatly during their transcribing communications from subconscious mind. This also frees up energy at the branches. Mari and Vickie are anticipating these finished reports.
